"THE EVENING WORLD'S" POSITION.

THE EVENING WORLD'S crusade against New York's outlaws is beginning to tell. District Attorney NICOLL announces that he will prosecute them, and has begun investigations with this object in view. Supt. MURRAY says that the police are willing to break up this illegal business, and will do it if THE EVENING WORLD will furnish the evidence.

For his information THE EVENING WORLD states its position. It is neither the city's Prosecuting Attorney nor an agent of the police. It is simply the champion of the people, whose rights and welfare it continually looks after. When THE EVENING WORLD discovers wrong and outlaws it turns upon it the searchlight of publicity. It directs the attention of the authorities. It is for them, being shown where the evil is, to put it down.

What THE EVENING WORLD will do is to keep the glare of publicity on those who are responsible for those acts of iniquity until they disappear. How long this will be depends largely on those officials who are responsible for the city's welfare.

TO MAKE SAFER TRAVELLING.

President DEPUE, of the New York Central Railroad, assures THE WORLD that his company has decided to "construct and complete a block-signal system from New York to Buffalo, and to do the work with all possible speed." The fact of the note in which he conveys this information is printed in this morning's issue of the paper named.

The fact of the Central Company's decision, as above, is chronicled as the beginning of THE WORLD's New Year's record of achievements, since the putting in of the block system will mark the complete success of a campaign begun by the paper immediately after the Christmas Eve horror at Hastings. It is a good omen.

THE WORLD and the public which it serves have good reason to rejoice in this first achievement of 1892.

ROBERT SAGE has paid a druggist $15 for lint and medicine used on the injured at the time of the dynamite explosion in the Arcade Building. It is said the owner of the building will try to hold Mr. Sage responsible for damages to the structure, and that the new water in the hallway of the Arcade and the man who runs the soda-water fountain at the entrance of the building will send in bills for losses sustained. An attempted blowing-up seems to lead to great opportunities for blowing in.

It is suggested by one of JAY GOULD's family that the "A. B. 33" who wrote dynamite letters to Mr. GOULD is a practical joker, who simply wants the fun of getting up a scare. It is to be hoped that, if such is the case, this budding genius of fun-making may be presently hunted out, that his sense of humor may receive such fostering care as it really merits. The world cannot afford to have so misanthropic a spirit hidden in nameless obscurity.

The murder of which NICOLA TARTAGLIA has been convicted was committed nearly two years ago. His case has been delayed, and his sentence was made necessary yesterday through the legal juggling which is encouraging murder in our midst. But the Italian Government has just found out, after all this time, that it may want to interfere, and so the law is kindly pushed aside once more. Yes, we are a patient people.

An Illinois bank cashier who stole $275,000 has completed a five years' term in prison. His booty had been snugly placed where it would be hard to do him the most good. Now he is going to Europe to enjoy it, eighteen unnumbered indictments, on the strength of which he was re-arrested, having been quashed. This man's virtue as a really scientific stealer has indeed brought its own reward.

Columbus pastors are seriously considering the matter of striking against offering prayer for nothing at the openings of the daily sessions of the Ohio State Legislature. It is evident that they are hopeless of seeing their work rewarded by any tangible effects of the prayer upon the members of the legislative body.

A mother in a drunken stupor on the floor, a baby girl in flames on the couch, the result of playing with matches. That was the spectacle in a West Forty-first street tenement yesterday. The baby cannot live, and the mother is to be prosecuted. But of what avail is such prosecution?

The persistent occupation of Eastbourne by the Salvationists, despite the edict of the local authorities, with the rioting consequent to the action, make it look as if that particular detachment of the Army didn't object to a taste of real war.

The boycott on the Chinese at Hutto, Mon., continues, with no sign of giving way. It is most likely that the Mongolian race will soon be entirely out of it, so far as that town is concerned.

McLIVANE, burglar and murderer, is again under sentence of death for the crime he committed almost three years ago. It is high time to leave Justice a clear track in this case.

"LOHENGRIK."

Wagner's somewhat laborious "Lohengrin" was presented at the Metropolitan Opera-House last night with admirable effect by a cast of great talent. There was a large house, except in the upper regions, and the audience heard an impressive and a thoroughly conscientious performance. The Klara of Miss Emma Eames was capably sung. Miss Eames's voice was clear, tender and correct, and her admirable stage presence lent an additional charm to her interpretation. In the bridal chamber scene of the third act, Miss Eames was particularly successful. The Ortruda of Miss Gullia Iavotti was somewhat weak, vocally and dramatically, and the role is an important one. Jean de Reszke was a picturesque Lohengrin, and he sang with skill and precision. Sig. Magini Ciolek was the Frederick, and Edouard de Reszke was the Kriemhild.

Sig. Magini Ciolek. The opera was excellently staged, and the last scene was extremely effective.

"Tomorrow night a great treat will be offered in the shape of 'Faust,' with a perfect cast. Miss Albani, the ideal Marguerite, was assisted by an ably chosen chorus. 'The Jewel Song,' which she sang so exquisitely for the little newboys Christmas Day. Miss Schuch will appear as Siebel. Mr. Hauemaster as Marthe, Edouard de Reszke as Mephistopheles, Marjorie as Valentine, Jean de Reszke as Faust and Vassilissa Wagner.

A Narrow Escape.

In descending the stairs at the Chambers street Elevated station I rubbed against a man who was ascending. That was nothing to me, but one of those things that can be caused by riding or walking on more or less in knocking about New York, and those of us who cross the bridge are never without at least one broken rib or dislocated shoulder. This man turned and followed me down to the foot of the stairs and said: "Sir! I've a good mind to knock your head off!"

Please don't do it.

"The idea of your bumping into me in that fashion," he growled, as we walked up street together. "You need a licking, sir!"

"But let it go this time."

"There was plenty of room," he went on, "but you had to go and bang right into me! I propose to give you something to remember me by!"

"Thanks! Put it in my Christmas stocking."

"And if you are alive when I get through with you!"

"Yes. Please walk up a little faster, as I'm in a hurry."

"You won't be in such a hurry after I get through with you!"

He walked up to Broadway, crossed over to the City Hall Park, and had walked half way to Park Row when he stopped and said:

"I've got to go to Bridgeport."

"Yes."

"I may be gone a month or so."

"Well?"

"But I shall return, and when I do I will hunt you up!"

"Always glad to see you."

"And give you the all-furthest whaling man of your size ever got! If I hadn't got to go to Bridgeport I'd do it now. It's simply delayed for a few weeks, however."

"I save. Good-night."

"Good-night, sir. Remember: the all-furthest whaling man ever got, and it won't make any difference if there are a dozen policemen around!"

YOUNG EMMET.

For the last few weeks statements have been made to the effect that young J. K. Emmet, in many towns did a better business than his famous father, father had done. The young man has been vigorously and most cruelly advertised. He has instigated the system of comparisons that has been adopted at the club-house, and has been doing things. I confess that I was shocked when, almost before the body of the only Fritz was cold, the young fellow rushed into print with the announcement that he intended to resume his father's career, that he had resigned his place before—and so on, and so forth.

Sentimentally, all this was enough to bring tears to a stone—this rapid obituary, this incessant and unnecessary activity. Commercially, it was a piece of business, striking from the California and the California into the bag. And what good is sentimentality? What value has the sentimentalism of a question to offer—the barren sin of sentimentalism, as one writer calls it?

J. K. Emmet was one of the most popular actors of his day. Nothing could dim his lustre, although much happened that might have dimmed it. The peculiar gifts that lifted him into public favor cannot be acquired by others. They were an indelible magnetism and an overwhelming humanity. His imitators can buy the grease-paint, the clothes, the plays that were associated with poor Fritz, but they cannot buy his magnetism. It is gone with him, for his son has not inherited it.

The young man began an engagement at the Grand Opera-House last night. As he bounded upon the stage an ovation was given him for the sake of his name. It did not seem to touch him. He responded cheerily and cheekily. Probably every man and woman in that house had admired the father, and for his sake and for the sake of the name, he was given a fair interpretation. Go to the Grand Opera-House, my friends, and see the young comedian. Then you can return to your homes and be loyal to the memory of favorite Fritz.

"The King is dead"—the rest of the quotation would be inappropriate.

Little Change in the Styles of Gloves—Lapels and Collars of Fur—Blue Serge for General Wear—Diamonds vs. Simple Neckties.

With respect to gloves, there is very little discernible difference between those worn last winter and the present season's designs. The Russian-leather gloves have secured so large a share of popular favor that, in addition to the ordinary tan-tanned leather, and fastened with tiny buttons, is one of the best gloves that can be caused by riding or walking on more or less in knocking about New York, and those of us who cross the bridge are never without at least one broken rib or dislocated shoulder. This man turned and followed me down to the foot of the stairs and said: "Sir! I've a good mind to knock your head off!"

Every woman is interested in this question, and there are some very wise ones who do not belong to Sorosis, but they do read THE EVENING WORLD, and their views on the subject are worth considering.

So THE EVENING WORLD opens its columns for the discussion of this most important subject. And to make the discussion more interesting, it will give a gold double eagle to the woman who best shows how a husband should be managed.

This will be interesting to the husbands too, for every sensible man, if he is managed at all, wants to be managed well. And she who has the best ideas will be an object of admiration, not only to her own but to the opposite sex.

THE EVENING WORLD will give a gold double eagle to the woman who shows how a husband should be managed.

"How to Manage a Husband." The plan must be contained in two hundred words, written on one side of the paper, have the writer's name and address not necessarily for publication, and be directed to HUSBAND EDITOR, EVENING WORLD, PULITZER BUILDING.

Bill Dunn, of Jersey City, is developing quite a reputation as a middle-weight pugilist. Some time ago he made short work of a clever colored pugilist named "The Harlem Cooler," and in three rounds, Dunn with Bill Dunn's brother, "If Dunn beats him he will be sent to San Francisco to meet Alvin Grigalins, who has been making a reputation on the Pacific slope.

Although in the matter of diamonds the modern bracelet becomes more and more resplendent it seems to require more and more dazzling whiteness of manly features. A tiny chain of brilliant gracefully fastened, whence depends a heart-shaped old Indian diamond of priceless worth, a lightly threaded row of flowers in many-colored enamel and soft-colored gems, whose very names ring stately and old-world; trinkets such as these are loved by women of refinement and true taste.

Dinner and dessert services are numerous in design, and vary in price from $100 to $275. Many of them are bordered, and others consist entirely of a most lovely dark blue enamel, embellished with gold or with medallions painted by hand, with flowers or classic figures. Many dessert services are painted with birds, each plate and dish being different, and others with flowers and landscapes.

At the Metropolitan Opera "box people" take their sugar plums from antique snuff-boxes.

Princess dresses are very much in vogue, and many of them are lined about three parts of the way up the skirt with horsehair in order to make them firm and prevent any falling in between the bottom of the under-skirt and the heels. Quite a favorite mode of making them is with three box-pleats behind, which allows plenty of fulness in the skirt, and small pointed paniers on either side, cut all in one with the under-skirt and the bodice. These paniers are usually braided, and so are the sleeves, and the Medici collars and the dresses are handsome and suitable for the most part of the season. It is not, however, quite everybody who can wear a Princess gown and look well in it. The young and slim usually do, and so do the middle-aged who have retained their figures without additional and superfluous adipose tissue.

"The Evening World" Opens Its Columns for This Important Subject.

A Gold Double Eagle Will Be Given for the Best Plan.

Sorosis, the pioneer of women's clubs, discussed "how to manage husbands" yesterday. It was a kindly discussion, but the important question was left undecided. Each of the debaters gave her ideas, but the problem was no nearer its solution when they had ended than when they began.

Every woman is interested in this question, and there are some very wise ones who do not belong to Sorosis, but they do read THE EVENING WORLD, and their views on the subject are worth considering.

So THE EVENING WORLD opens its columns for the discussion of this most important subject. And to make the discussion more interesting, it will give a gold double eagle to the woman who best shows how a husband should be managed.
